25X1

Information on Provisions Shipments Along the Morth China Coast Requested by CSS

	moving by see from Si	nanghai northward	to Dairen, Tientsin, and Chinhuangta	o. A few shipments seem	to have originate	d at Lienyunkang.
		wheat, wheat f	lour, rice, salted fish,
broad beans	, dried sweet potatoes, ar	d sweet potato f	lour. Wheat and wheat flour accou	nt for the major part of t	he shipments	and were sent principally	to Dairen. The rice see	uas to have gone	primarily to Tientsin and Chinhua	ngtao. No clear pattern i	s discernable as	yet for the other commodities.	•
Ind	irect evidence seems to in	dicate that the r	aovement is probably larger in 19	957 than in the previous y	ear.	·
The	existence of provisions si	nipments in 1954	and 1955 is also unknown existence of provisions since the known that such shipsen known that such shipment
Though it is	known that such shipment
Though it is	known that such shipment
Though it is	known that such shipment
Though it is	known that such shipment

The Chinese coestal fleet was augmented in July by 11 Russian-flag vessels and one British vessel. Six of the Russian vessels were operating in the China coastal trade in June and 8 were operating in May but seem not to have been engaged in transporting provisions. The Russian vessels have resumed their trade either in the Soviet Far East or in the China coastal trade, but not carrying provisions, since July. The British vessel has resumed its normal voyages in the coastal trade south of Shanghai.

25X1

The vessels observed during the period of stury are primarily those large vessels (over 1,000 GRT) of the Chinese fleet operating on the North Coast.

25X1

Thus it would seem that the coverage of the vessels engaged in the provisions movement is incomplete. The size of the fleet of small vessels operating

25X1

1	Approved For Release 2003/05/28 : CIA-RDP61S00527A000200130005-7
	along the north coast and that might be engaged in the movement is unknown.	2
(1
	The total provisions movement may be account for the major part of the total movement.

25X1